Retail prices of sugar, vegetable oil and pulses

147. SHRI ANAND SHARMA: Will the Minister of FOOD AND CIVIL SUPPLIES be pleased to state;

(a) what were the retail prices of sugar, vegetable oil and pulses as on 15-12-89; and

(b) what steps are to be taken to reduce prices and to ensure availabiUty of essential commodities?

THE MINISTER OF FOOD AND' CIVIL SUPPLIES (SHRI NATHU RAM MIRDHA): (a) A statement showing the retail prices of sugar as on 15-12-89 at selected centres is attached. (See below). Another statement showing the retail prices of pulses (gram, and tur, arhar) and vegetable oils (groundnut oil, mustard oil and vanaspati) as on 13-12-89 at selected centres is given in Annexure.

[See Appendix CLII, Annexure No. 2].

(b) The main thrust of the strategy to contain the price rise and to ensure availability of essential commodities is to increase the production particularly those which are in. short supply. The procurement of cereals items has been intensified. The public distribution system is being strengthened a part and parcel of overall process of planning and development. The imports of essential commodities like pulses, sugar and edible oils may be effected to augment the domestic availability of the commodities as and when necessary to cheek any abnormal rise in their prices. Besides price and availability monitoring mechanism, is being strengthened, and the Essential Commodities Act and other regulatory measures would be strictly enforced.
